

Brimming with many a creature
And secret lives
Of various types of nature.
Trees overlook the pond as it thrives.
Pushing for sunlight
Seas of green fight
For the best
Position to rest.
The king of the pristine pool
Towers over each and every subject
From the large to miniscule,
Who without a doubt are full of respect.
Thick green algae continues to be a brooder
Insuring they defend the breach against an Intruder.
They form a wall to block man
And their litter.
The pond acting as a mirror
Reflecting every branch in great detail
Even if they are frail.
We need to protect
The ponds to help the family
Insect,
Who use it as their home cannily.
Save the Ponds

By Florence Wyatt age 10